To whom it may concern,

Please consider my application for the part-time youth support worker position, as advertised on Indeed.com. I am currently a 4th year student at University of British Columbia, as well as part-time freelance content producer in Vancouver.

As you will see in my resume, I am currently obtaining my Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology. This choice of major has given me the opportunity to take many courses surrounding child and adolescent development, social inequality and diversity, and mental health. I am therefore confident that my recent education has provided me with the knowledge, empathy and passion required to excel in this position.

To complement my post-secondary education, I have also worked with a diverse group of people in the advertising industry for over 20 years. This career has enabled me to not only strengthen my communication and organizational skills, but it has also solidified a strong work ethic and a passion for doing work that I love.

I believe that my unique position of school, life and work experience would be a great benefit to Covenant House and the at-risk youth it supports.

Thank you for taking the time to read through my application. If my background meets your needs for this position, please contact me at jennndunbarprod@gmail.com, or 604-976-65731.

Sincerely,

Jenn Dunbar
