

Different Definitions

Hate crimes can also be identified by the victim's interchangeability, meaning "any individual who possesses, or is perceived to possess, a specific trait could be selected as a target... because of some actual or perceived status that they are powerless to change" and for the crime's intended capacity to affect other individuals of the same status. (Jack McDevitt et. al., 2001, pp. 698).