Focus of Observation:

A diagram of a classroom layout. In the top-left corner, there is a dashed line and a quarter-circle arc indicating a door. The room is filled with desks arranged in three columns. The left column has three rows of three desks each. The middle column has three rows of three desks each. The right column has four rows: the top row has four desks, and the following three rows each have three desks. At the bottom of the diagram, there is a rectangular area divided into two parts: a smaller rectangle on the left labeled 'TEACHER DESK' and a larger rectangle on the right labeled 'WHITEBOARD'.
