

Graduate Services at the Centre for Student Involvement and Careers (CSI&C)

The CSI&C is a hub of career development expertise, programs, initiatives, and resources integrated within the full range of students' academic, co-curricular, & extra-curricular experiences. The CSI&C works in partnership with Faculties to support students to become career-ready graduates.

Graduate students (Masters and PhD, any discipline and any stage of their program) can access services related to career advising and development through the CSI&C (located in Brock Hall, Room 1036, open M-F from 9 to 6). Students can also access services for up to 1 year post graduation. Danielle Barkley, who holds a PhD, works as the Graduate Career Educator and can serve as the key point of contact for inquiries related to graduate students (danielle.barkley@ubc.ca).

Services available include:

- Graduate focused workshops and events, including discipline-targeted career planning workshops
- Networking opportunities and career panels featuring alumni and professionals
- Employer Engagement opportunities, such as employer information sessions and company presentations
- By request, faculty/department specific consultations and workshops on topics including career planning, networking, resumes, interviews etc.
- Weekly, graduate student-only drop-in advising hours (Fridays from 10:00 -12:00); held in the CSI&C, no appointment required
- Group advising conversations in which graduate students meet with the graduate career educator in small groups for discussion of common career-related questions
- A UBC hub within Ten Thousand Coffees (a digital mentorship and networking tool that connects students and young alumni for meaningful career conversations)
- One-on-one advising appointments, available by booking online or speaking to reception
