

June 1, 2020

For me, this is "Week 12" of Quarantine. I am scheduled to return to the Office on June 22... but who knows if that will happen. The return to office date has already been pushed back twice.

Everyone has been adapting to the isolation and social / physical distancing at their own rates. So far I've been very lucky, because I am able to work from home, my partner, is not so lucky.

I was tasked with creating a "Return to Office" course to ready employees for the new policies / procedures that will be put in place for when we return to the office.

I launched the course last week, just as our MPR changed the state of emergency, so I had to re-launch the course using the pushed back date.

My birthday is coming up next week, and I look forward to finding new creative ways to celebrate it, since, I can't spend the time with friends and family.

I need to brainstorm ideas for what I want to talk about in my text technologies class, for the final project.

I discussed the story-telling done in Ancient Greece in one of my comments.

Oh, I can find a topic similar to my original idea, Melodizing written content to anonymous writers or pseudonym writers.

Right now it is incredibly vague and it needs a lot more polish, but when it's done, I'm sure I'll have a project to be proud of. Well, hopefully...

I hope to make a larger dent with my work this week. We need to release my course in the upcoming months so I need to finish the recording and

The formatting/reviews very soon.

I also should go to the grocery store today, we are out of eggs and milk, hopefully I can be in and out fast enough with under 20 items. The grocery store has had significantly shorter lines recently, which I am eternally grateful for.

I am so grateful for my friends and family and wishing all good things for everyone.