Dear Dr. Anand,

Disease prevention is the key to health promotion. Dental health professionals strive for preventing dental diseases by minimizing associated risk factors and implementing preventive measures to advocate oral health. With the disease prevention focus in mind, this formal report has been prepared with immense support from you and the dental staff of Springdale Dental.

This report focuses on investigating the risk factors associated with increased caries incidence among adolescent clients at Springdale dental office. It also aims to analyse the preventive treatment interventions currently in place. The survey results from twenty clients and interviews with some dental team members have helped gather detailed information about the problem. Based on these findings and data from scholarly journal researched articles, it is recommended that preventive interventions like pit and fissure sealants be implemented. This will help lower the caries incidence and optimize the oral health of clients.

Without your assistance and reassurance, the process would have been quite challenging. It was a pleasure to complete this project. I hope this report can assist in attaining the disease prevention goal of the dental team. Please contact me at t.atwal@alumni.ubc.ca for any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

Tarandeep Atwal
