

She was but as a smile
Which glistens in a tear, Seen but a little while,
But, oh, how loved, how dear!

YOU APPEARED LIKE A WORD, IN THE PAGES OF MY FAVORITE

BOOK,
SO DIFFICULT TO PRONOUNCE YET,
I FORGOT THERE WERE MORE WORDS AHEAD TO LOOK

— NOOR UNNAHAR

Reprinted with permission from Wood by Jennica Harper, © 2013, Anvil Press

FEVER When he's gone she clicks the link, submits her criteria through drop-down menus: 2 or more bedrooms under 500 K.
She waits for red dots to appear, a pox she hopes to catch. No unique questions here: do we want a lawn to mow? We would need a lawnmower.
Do we want a Korean girl in the lower, practicing her violin? No matter: no hits. At best it's three quarters of a mil for a teardown. Or an East-side special, kid sister with a lisp.
Still, there's hope in the glow ... she rejigs, refines her search, such fun at first, she knows she should stop when the rub turns raw. The grass always greener in Dunbar.
But maybe. Maybe today there's a high enough ceiling.
Once more, knock wood for the happy ending.

— Jennica Harper

Continue the conversation: #PoetryInTransit @jennicaharper

project sponsors:

creativeBC

Win a free Monthly Pass!

THE BUZZER

Published by TransLink • September 23, 2016

© Christine Lumbardy

Celebrating 20 years of Poetry in Transit

A program to celebrate BC poets published in Canada

buzzer.translink.ca

love...

is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers

is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers

is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is allows
conquers
is
allows
conquers all

#arts umbrella
#chalkwall

Once we walked
under
the starlight

Barefoot
and
light
on concrete

Past the
shuttered
shops,
late night
derelicts

And wove
our own
dance
from drunken
steps
back home
and into
morning

Wed 2016-11-02, 10:04 PM

You ↕

Hi Jenny,

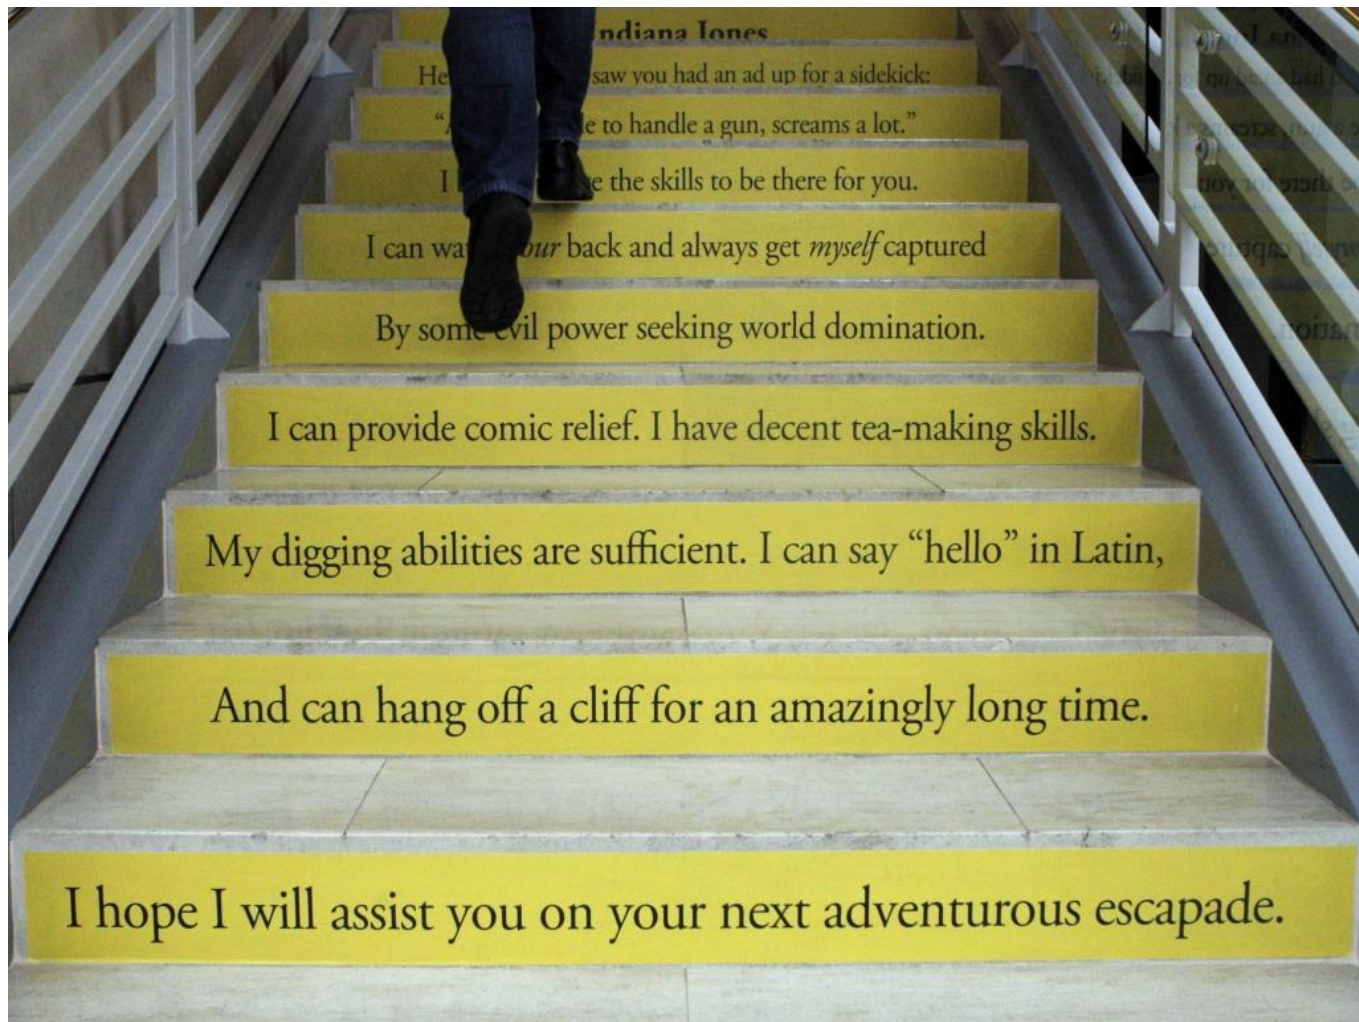

It's great that they're offering you these choices.
My first thought was the two tens and the 12.
And you may want to go with that.

Then I remembered it's semestered.
It will be challenging, but fun!

It's good to do two of something (two tens)
If it doesn't work with one class, you can fix it with the second one.
You don't get that with three preps.

So,
choice one- two tens, one 12.
choice two- two tens, one communication choice three- one ten, one 12, one comm.

Just my thoughts.
You'll do fine with either option.
p

I hope I will assist you on your next adventurous escapade.